Our MLB straight wagers have cashed two weeks in a row, and we follow last week's success up with another full card of winners!

We're as excited as you are for Game 3 of the Jazz / Warriors series, and we recommend a play on the Under on this game. The first two games have gone Over and the total line has been up to 217, but the Warriors know if they want to keep these games close they need to do a better job on defense and rebounding, and similarly, the Jazz will be in full lockdown mode on Baron Davis, as they realize he is the key to the Warriors' hopes. In the first round playoffs against Dallas, the Warriors have played great defense at home, holding the Mavs to just 92 points per contest on 40% shooting. The Under has gone 3-1 in the regular season matchups between these teams. We all know what a great defensive team the Jazz are. They controlled the boards in the first two games, winning that battle 114-68. The Jazz have controlled the boards of late even against Houston winning that battle eventually helped Boozer and team finish off the Rockets in the first round. Both teams will play well on the D, so expect a low scoring game here.

Play Under 217 (Golden State Warriors / Utah Jazz).

In baseball action, we're playing the Arizona Diamondbacks tonight, with Brandon Webb facing Chris Sampson. In the last three starts on the road, Webb has allowed only four runs in 22 innings. Arizona's 3-0 in that time and the D'backs have won by a combined score of 21-4. There's also something that gets into the D'Backs when Webb pitches on the road as they've averaged 7.25 runs in his four road starts this season. Webb has a stellar 1.78 ERA in his career against the Astros. Houston looks like improving this month but most of their winning games were decided by no more than two runs against a weak Cincy team. Webb is a dominant pitcher and look for him to deliver a dominant performance in Houston tonight.

Play Arizona Diamondbacks, Moneyline.
